The child was scrambling from bed.
She saw her father's form in the door-way. He slammed the door shut, and the report of three pistol-shots followed in quick specession.

Carlie stood on the lounge pointing into the gloom of the corner, screaming:

"Oh, my mamma, my mamma"

Lily, for the second time crossing her father's body, rushed to the spot, and there in the shadow of the table, in the dimly lighted room, she fell upon her mother's body.

With all her love concentrated in the one parent, the only one of the children old enough to feel strongly, gave herielf up to the most passionate anguish. The mother was dead; had died instantly. The child had to be torn from her sheeding form, to which she clung with wild appeals for a sign of life.

Of the four shots that Peterson required to finish the butchery, the first had struck the woman in the right side of the head. She had fallen at length upon her back. The second had been fired into her upturned face, crashing through the teeth of the left jaw. Peterson had lodged the third souarely in the centre of his forehead, and falling back in a like position to his wife, lying to wellow here to his forehead, and falling back in a like position to his wife, lying to wellow and the position to his wife, lying to wellow and the position to his wife, lying to wellow and the position to his wife, lying to wellow.
